EXT/INT. A SCHOOL IN A LITTLE TOWN IN FRANCE. SCHOOLYARD. / TEACHERS ROOM. - DAY

On a sunny morning. A schoolyard of a little town's school in France. Students having a break, eating their snacks, talking, laughing, shouting.
A teacher observes the students from an open window--

INT. TEACHERS ROOM

DIANE (39, brunette, short hair, wearing a wool sweater and jeans) stands at the open window. The teacher's table is messed up with corrected documents, pencils and books.

The door opens silently. School Director JAMES (51, black) steps in.

JAMES

(excited)

Hey Diane! Just heard about your excellent idea for this new theatre project! The kids will love it...I am sure!

DIANE

(relaxed)

Hi James.
Oh, well...yes. Well it crossed my mind the past days.
Found the manuscript for "The puss in boots"
at home between my books. Thought, it could be a nice idea to bring the kids closer to acting. Besides, the story is giving something special to the kids.

JAMES

That's right.
Truly a nice one with a deep meaning. What you do is always with a deep meaning, I so appreciate that, Diane.

That's good for the kids. Giving them the right guidance for their future. Did you choose the actor for the protagonist role already?

DIANE

Darlene is on my mind. She shows a nice singing talent. Guess she can make it. The rehearsals will start next week.

JAMES

Very good. Make sure I will be present for the first rehearsal.

DIANE

That's so nice of you!

JAMES

Alright.
So... you have a relaxing weekend.
See you monday!

James leaves the teacher's room. After having a thoughtful look outside the window, Diane sits back down finishing corrections of the students homework.
