Unlucky at love, perhaps. Or just maybe some of us need a new game plan, in order to find the perfect mate. Get Hitched is for singles that want to date with the intention of getting married, but have been lacking the ability and/or skills to connect with that special someone and develop that connection into a mutually satisfying relationship, with a strong potential for marriage. Four contestant will compete for the grand prize; the wedding and honeymoon of their dreams.

Get Hitched/Premium Version (With All the Bells and Whistles)

A. Outline of Synopsis

I. The Goals

In order to reach the Get Hitched competition goal the candidate must earn the most points, by:

- a. making improvements to their physical appearance
- b. achieving life coach goals
- c. fully understanding the Get Hitched Dating System
- d. make connections with 5 date-ables, by the end of the Season.
If a contestant does not make any date-able connections from their list, he/she must revert to the viewers recommendations* for which, only 5 points will be given.
- e. of the 5 date-ables, the contestant must choose one, a "relationship date-able," in order to receive the prize

*If candidates are not successful in making connections with any date-ables then the candidate must comply with the viewers recommendations. Get Hitched viewers will vote-in (after the end of Episode 1) who they think the best 10 choices are for each contestant (in order from 1st to 10th).

II. The Dates

- prior to going on each date, contestants will be graded by makeover gurus, as to their "look" and their dating guru will grade them as to their: dating event selection (where they have chosen to go for the date, or what they have selected do with their date) and the attitude they are manifesting regarding the date, and the game plan for that date.
- after each date the contestant will be given a score, on the success of the date, as to their personal participation. Date-able's behaviour notwithstanding.
- after dating for a six months period, whoever is engaged and scored the highest points during the programme, will receive the £25,000 wedding/reception prize
- if a contestant reaches the 150 optimal point goal. Any points over that amount add to the contestants total score. And to the amount of the grand prize. At the value of 1pt = £1,000 in addition to the £25,000. If the contestant that completes all tests, tasks and challenges, and at the end of the 6 months period has fulfilled the requirements for the prize, has a score of 155 points. Than the final prize, to that contestant will be £30,000.

D. Get Hitched Dating Method

Many people who want a serious relationship, with the intention of marriage tend to focus on one prospective person at a time. And when that one relationship does not pan out, disappointment, despair and defeat are the result. Which can lead to discouragement, hopelessness and a negative attitude toward dating. The philosophy of Get Hitched is "never put your all your eggs in one basket." Each contestant will be dating and forming progressive relationships with several date-ables, during the show. Of the date-ables that each contestant makes a connection with, only one will be that special someone, the "relationship date-able." Each contestant must determine, after using the skills learnt and advice used (combined with: gut feeling, trial-and-error and chemistry) which one is right for them. And continue to work and build on the relationship, after they leave the show, in order to win the grand prize.

In other words, the Get Hitched Dating Method its similar looking for meaningful employment. A job-seeker sends off CVs, videos, samples of work to many prospective employers. Of the amount that is sent out only a handful will be taken under consideration. And of that handful only one is chosen.

The resource for date-a-ables, during the initial and proceeding episodes will be provided from the following sources:

- online dating service profiles
- contestants will be challenged to connect with date-ables at various venues of their personal choice or interests (gym, museum, library, coffee shop)
