U.S. SECRET SERVICE

THE ABSOLUTE

MEN MAKE COUNTERFEIT MONEY.
MONEY MAKES COUNTERFEIT MEN.

THE ABSOLUTE IS A ONE HOUR ANTHOLOGY MYSTERY CRIME DRAMA

SYNOPSIS WHAT IS THE PRICE OF FREE MONEY?

The day he died, President Lincoln established the Secret Service with a flick of his pen. His former personal spy and assassin Robert Wood, leads the infant agency with an anti-counterfeiting mission, while reporting to Terrence McKinley - the current Secretary of Treasury struggling to bring economic change to a fragile and recovering nation.

In NH, Chief Wood's top undercover agents, Luce and Quinn Warner, are investigating a backwoods counterfeiting trio - a brilliant former doctor and master counterfeiter, Hyrum "Copper" Davis, his previous partner's widow -the resilient Lane Holloway, and the mystery box, Mr. Parker.

Chief Wood's parallel investigation leads him on the path to Julian Hetheford - a revered public figure, president of three national banks, and prior treasury secretary and mentor to McKinley. He is a charming and highly intelligent wolf among sheep with a bubbling ruthless character wound tightly by his calvinist upbringing. Working for him is his right-hand woman, Muriel, an escaped slave turned lethal henchman, and a wild west transplant gang corraled by Ash, a calm and calculating criminal with a code. Julian's plan is simple: flood the market with counterfeit bills, debase gold, instigate public panic and bank runs, control the media, and swoop in as the hero. Julian will not stop until he gains total economic control of the re-United States, for if you control the economy, you control the nation.
