Work Experience

Owen Taylor & Sons (2017)

As a team, we were tasked to create a corporate video to demonstrate good cleaning practices a butcher's company called Owen Taylor & Sons. From this experience, it helped me work in a team better, as well as following a deadline. They were happy with the finished product.

Bombardier Engineering (2013)

While working here, I was tasked with reviewing a new CAD software. At the end of my experience, I had to present the review to several people. While challenged at first, I believe I have developed my teamworking and presentation skills because of this.

About Me

I'm a filmmaker and videographer based in Derbyshire, UK. I've always been fascinated by the creative process behind film since I was a child. That same fascination is what has motivated me to pursue filmmaking as a career option.

I'm proficient in using many different cameras, including the Arri Alexa Mini and Red Epic Weapon 8K. I can also use many different editing software, including Premiere Pro and Final Cut.

All the way through my time in education, I've kept busy making films and videos outside of assignments to hone my skills. Some of these include narrative film, music videos, and documentaries. To make those films, they all required good organisational skills and high motivation. I've also become a better team player and communicator because of that. Each project taught me something new, and I hope to carry on growing as a filmmaker.
